

La Concha Resort Décor

During the rebirth of La Concha Resort, well-known interior decorator Jorge Rosselló was in charge of the décor. Referring to it as Tropical Modernism, he describes the style as a unique blend of modern and Art Deco design.

- Lobby: Picture windows with a view of the pool create a sense of spaciousness, while the wave-like ceiling produces an aquatic effect. At night, the bar is transformed into a vibrant lounge where anything can happen.
- Furnishings: Light colors, stainless steel, and African mahogany create the ideal combination of modern design, comfort, and functionality.
- Pool: The fusion of minimalist elements with the intensity of the Latin culture makes the pool area the place to be. At night, the lobby and the pool become one, with fountains creating a spectacular scene from all sides – across the lobby, by the pool, and around the outside of the hotel.
- Rooms: The combination of modernism and comfort creates an ambience of total relaxation, while the blends of whites, blues, greens, and oranges, coupled with the panoramic view of the beach and sea make these rooms the ultimate seaside escape.
